From the Principal's desk

Giinagay; welcome to week 4.

World Teachers Day: Last week we celebrated World Teachers Day. At Nana Glen Public School we are lucky to have an excellent team of teachers who go above and beyond for our students. All of our teachers bring different strengths to our school, and this gives our kids rich learning opportunities and unique experiences. Walt Disney said, "You can dream, create, design and build the most wonderful place in the world ... but it requires people to make the dream a reality." Our teachers at Nana Glen are the people working hard to make this dream a reality for our kids.

PLaSP Meetings: In weeks 6 and 7 classroom teachers will hold meetings with parents/caregivers to review Pesonalised Learning and Support Plans (PLaSP) for identified students. These personalised plans address specific learning and support needs of students, such as individual student learning goals, communication, behaviour, health care and transition requirements. Adjustments for a student are regularly monitored, periodically revised, and adapted or changed where needed and in consultation with parents/carers and any outside agencies. Your input at these meetings is extremely valuable in helping us to successfully cater to the individual needs of your child. We can organise these meetings via phone or face to face for 15 minutes. We look forward to speaking with you.

Christmas Raffle: Just a reminder for students to remember to bring their tickets back for the end of year raffle. The more tickets you sell the more entries you will receive to go into the draw to win a fabulous bike. If you would like to donate to our raffle, please bring in these items to the office. There are some amazing prizes to be won as shown in the picture below. If you would like more raffle tickets, please come to the office.

Have a great week, Joshua Hugo.

What's Happening in Year 3

Mindfulness time is an important part of our day. It allows the students to become focused and engage in their learning. In Year 3, we continue to develop our growth mindsets. Students are practicing their journalling skills during mindfulness time. We are thinking about things we are grateful for, positive things that are happening in our day and things we have learnt or wonder about. Students are enjoying this time for reflection and challenging themselves to find the good in every day. Mrs Reibel ©

Getting Along with Behaviourally Challenging Students

3 Tips for Teachers

Establishing and maintaining healthy relationships with students whose behaviour challenges both teachers and other students is a core strategy for the classroom management toolbox.

Here are three top tips for getting along with students whose behaviour is difficult to manage.

Create kindness and empathy

Begin each day with the assumption that this student is doing the best they can in any situation. Consider their red zone behaviours as unskilful attempts to have their needs met. Questions that may be helpful to ask yourself include; how come they learnt to behave this way? And, what context might have shaped the way this student sees the

Keep in mind that like you this student has hopes and dreams. Like you they have fears and worries. Like you they have people they care about and people who care for them. Like you they wish they could be the best version of themselves.

Tune in and be attentive

Get curious about who this person is and who they might like to become. Find out their likes and dislikes by asking the student questions, and then ask again. Look interested and adopt a friendly posture. If they respond with 'dunno' or nothing at all, it's possible they really don't know. Take this uncertainty as an opportunity to connect and find out the answer together. Keep it fun by using a friendly or playful tone of voice.

Model how to manage feelings

If you notice the student's behaviour is escalating towards the red zone, model how you would like the student to regulate their emotions. Stop, take a breathe, and observe what's happening inside and outside. Then proceed with greater flexibility in how you choose to respond.

Relationships can be repaired - if you are willing. The power of coming back to a distrustful student and taking ownership for your own behaviour by saying, 'sorry I made the wrong call there, let's try again,' will have an impact on the student (even if they don't show it straight away). Next time they make an unskillful action, listen to see if they make the same offer and be ready to receive it.
